TO MERGE INDEPENDENTS

GATES PLANS RIVAL OF GREAT STEEL COMBINE

PIG IRON POOL BROKEN

Trust Sends Best Men to Watch Movements.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 27.—Details have become known here of a plan to form a rival to the United States Steel corporation. It is stated that the Republic iron and steel company, of which John W. Gates is the head, and the Jones & Laughlin interests have combined; that the entire southern pig iron interests are being consolidated under the same banner and that the Chamberlains work will also be part of the combination, in addition to many other independent interests of the country.

The Jones & Laughlin interests have made the first open move by arranging to build their own line to the lakes for carrying, etc., so that they will be independent of the lines now to be controlled by the steel trust. During the past week there was granted to the Jones & Laughlin interests at Pittsburg the right to construct a railroad bridge across the river at this place, and, though it was given out at the time that it was merely a move to assist the Wash. railroad to get into the works of the Jones & Laughlin company, it has developed that this big steel concern has taken the right of way and surveyed a line through Allegheny and Washington counties in Pennsylvania and is now pointing toward the lakes in the vicinity of Cleveland. In addition, Jones & Laughlin have taken on several miles of river frontage on the Ohio several miles below Pittsburg, where it is understood they will establish the largest ore yards in the world and where they will build another pig iron plant as well as other steel mills.

The disruption of the southern pig iron agreement during the past week has been attributed to President Topping of the Republic iron and steel company, who, since the removal of his headquarters from Chicago to Pittsburg, has been hand in glove with the Jones & Laughlin interests, and those who should know say the deal now showing front was framed some time ago and that it was part of the move to locate the offices of the Republic iron and steel company at Pittsburg, from where the battle will be fought.

The breaking of the southern pig iron pool is understood in Pittsburg to be the opening gun of President Topping of the Republic company, which also dominates the Tennessee iron and steel company, and that it is the object by a continued cutting in rates on southern pig to force the Jones-Laughlin steel and iron company into line and have a combination with them to control the entire southern field in pig iron.

The fact is significantly covered in here also that the Republic iron and steel company has just lined up for a long fight by taking on 60,000 tons of pig iron, and it was over the sale of so much pig to the big rival that the steel corporation almost fell out with the Tennessee company, and the latter was then figured out by the Republic interest just what the Republic people meant by taking on such a world of pig iron. Now they think they know.

The United States steel corporation is fully alive to the conditions and has sent some of its best men into the south to look over the field and keep close watch on Jones and Topping. Several good men from Pittsburg were sent south on wire orders from New York within two hours after news came that the pig iron pool had been disrupted.

The Very Best Remedy for Bowel Trouble.

Mr. M. F. Burroughs, an old and well-known resident of Bluffton, Ind., says: "I regard Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as the very best remedy for bowel trouble. I make this statement after having used the remedy in my family for several years. I am never without it." This remedy is almost sure to be needed before the summer is over. Why not buy it now and be prepared for such an emergency? For sale by F. B. Lillie & Co.

MAKE THE PENALTY FIT THE CRIME.

With scores of tins and bottles before him, Congressman Mann, of Illinois, the other day illuminated the Pure Food bill which was before the House, by showing some of the many adulterants used by those who put up food products.

The reports state that Mr. Mann was very attentively listened to.

He deserved to be. The information he imparted was of the practical sort. Every adulteration he made evident; every sham he revealed, made a strong argument for the passage of a strict pure food law.

Among the shams he displayed was an imitation honey made of glucose.

This deleterious stuff, it was explained, has as large a sale as the genuine article.

A preparation for preserving meats consisted of sulphite of soda and red coal-tar dye. Both are irritants and injurious to health.

To be a positive relief, the National pure food law must be accompanied by very heavy penalties for violations.

The man who palms off glucose as honey is obtaining money by false pretence. The punishment for this deliberate swindle should be a long term of imprisonment.

Men will violate the law when a fine is the only punishment. In their greed for wealth they will risk detection, provided they are let off with a fine. But even to the most avaricious there is terror in the prison sentence.

Fear is the only thing that keeps men honest. Make it a penitentiary offence to adulterate food and the adulterations will largely cease.

The most severe and drastic pure food law will not affect the manufacturers of honest products. It is aimed only at the rogues. To be really effective it must make rogues dangerous and unprofitable.

The man who willingly puts dangerous compounds into food preparations is willing to risk killing others that he may profit. Such a man has practically murdered in his heart. Treat him as a murderer and the adulteration of food will stop.

In the pure food law there must be no dallying with danger. Make the penalty for adulteration imprisonment. The honest dealer will not be affected. On the contrary, he will be protected against illegal competition.

To let off the offending manufacturer with a fine will be encouraging dishonesty. The man who will risk human health and life is the fit subject for a prison cell, and his stay there should be lengthy.

MR. ROCKEFELLER'S DEFENSE.

(New York World.)

John D. Rockefeller's defense that he has had "no connection with Standard Oil for some twelve years," that he has "not even been in the office for seven years," sounds like a confession that he does not want to be held responsible in public opinion for the trust. Some people will discover a touch of shame in his statement. It is only lately that Standard Oil magnates—Rockefeller, Rogers and Archbold, for example—have become sensitive to criticism.

Yet John D. Rockefeller's name is officially given as that of the president and a director of the Standard Oil. Unlike most of his business associates, Mr. Rockefeller holds only this single directorship. It may be that he prefers to put himself in the light of being only a dummy director. But the law makes no discrimination in favor of dummies. Corporation presidents and directors are still presidents and directors, whether they go near their offices or not. A situation can be easily imagined where President Rockefeller might be criminally prosecuted for certain transactions in the name of the Standard Oil. A subpoena secured by Attorney-General Hadley of Missouri last spring kept him in exile in New Jersey for weeks. If it had not been for his connection with Standard Oil Mr. Hadley would have cared no more for his presence than if he had been the worst-paid watchman at Bayonne.

Mr. Rockefeller must face facts as well as prejudices. He is still president of Standard Oil. He does not threaten to resign as protest against Standard Oil methods.

Simultaneously with Col. Amos Ewing's announced candidacy for delegate to the constitutional convention comes the statement that the Indians living in the Osage country will engage in a farewell "stomp" dance, from which it is surmised that Col. Amos has already started his fight.

J. Ogden Armour says that the president was trying to get even with the packers for their "immunity bath." More than that, he got even.

PERISH IN WATERSPOUT

Four Little Vessels in Typhoon's Path and All Go Down.

New York, June 27.—Twelve sailors are believed to have perished in four vessels overturned by a terrific northeast gale and hurricane that swept western Long Island and Staten Island and swept across New York bay and the New Jersey coast line today. With sea and sky united suddenly off Sandy Hook point, the waters of New York bay were torn by a veritable typhoon, in the midst of which a great waterspout, but black as ink, thirty or forty feet wide at its base, reaching high into the air and revolving rapidly, rushed upon a group of vessels anchored in the channel.

The doomed craft were a two-masted schooner, the Helix, N. J.; three sailing vessels of the New York and New Jersey oil and gas company and a large tug boat. They were lying in the rearward of Fort Monmouth.

The hapless men aboard the vessels were unable to make a move for their escape. The waterspout, about the size of a giant, and hollow roar swelled on about after the other, seized upon the schooner and the crew, and, after tossing them about like cork balls, dashed them to pieces with their sterns striking in the bottom of the bay.

Speakers of the tragedy at Fort Monmouth, N. J., two miles distant, declared that for a distance of one mile from Sandy Hook point across the bay to where the vessels were anchored the sea and sky suddenly became black as midnight.
